Just as the Psalmist desired the works of his hands established, so also do we as student nurses seek for the products of our hands to be stabilized. From the unsteady grasp of an entering freshman to the skilled touch of an efficient graduate, the actions of our hands portray our maturity in nursing. We present this yearbook in order to record the memories and progress that took place as we became established and grew in the services of our chosen profession.

LUTHERAN HOSPITAL SCHOOL OF NURSING—FORT WAYNE, INDIANA

DEDICATION

It is with loyalty and deepest affection that we dedicate our yearbook to Miss Norma Huyck, advisor of the graduating class. Her kindness and understanding were invaluable aids to us throughout our training years. We recall especially her warmth and gentleness during our probie months and her continuing generosity evidenced through her unselfish nature. As an advisor she assisted us in making the transition and appropriate adjustments so necessary to take on the proper character and attitude of our profession.

ADMINISTRATION

Mr. Edgar C. Kruse, highly respected administrator of our hospital, has just finished serving his first term as top official at Lutheran. In addition to his numerous duties as an administrator, he is a leading member of the community. His devotion and loyalty have endeared him to the hearts of all with whom he has come in contact.

Mr. Edgar C. Kruse

Miss Marie E. Moehring, Director of Nursing and of Education, has spent countless hours of unselfish service to raise the standards of our school. Because of her untiring efforts, the school was able to make its initial bid for full accreditation from the National League for Nursing. Despite her pressing hospital responsibilities, she still finds time to instruct Professional Adjustment classes and to instill within her students the high ideals of nursing which are so much a part of her.

WE SALUTE . . .

The Alumnae Organization's 50th Anniversary

A reproduction of an old photo pictures the class of 1907, the first graduating class. Seated, left to right are: Amelia Rathert, Minnie Walker, the Superintendent of Nurses, and Amelia Hilgendorf. Standing are Anna Lau- man, Augusta Fisher, Ida Neuman, Meta Holman and Emma Gerke.

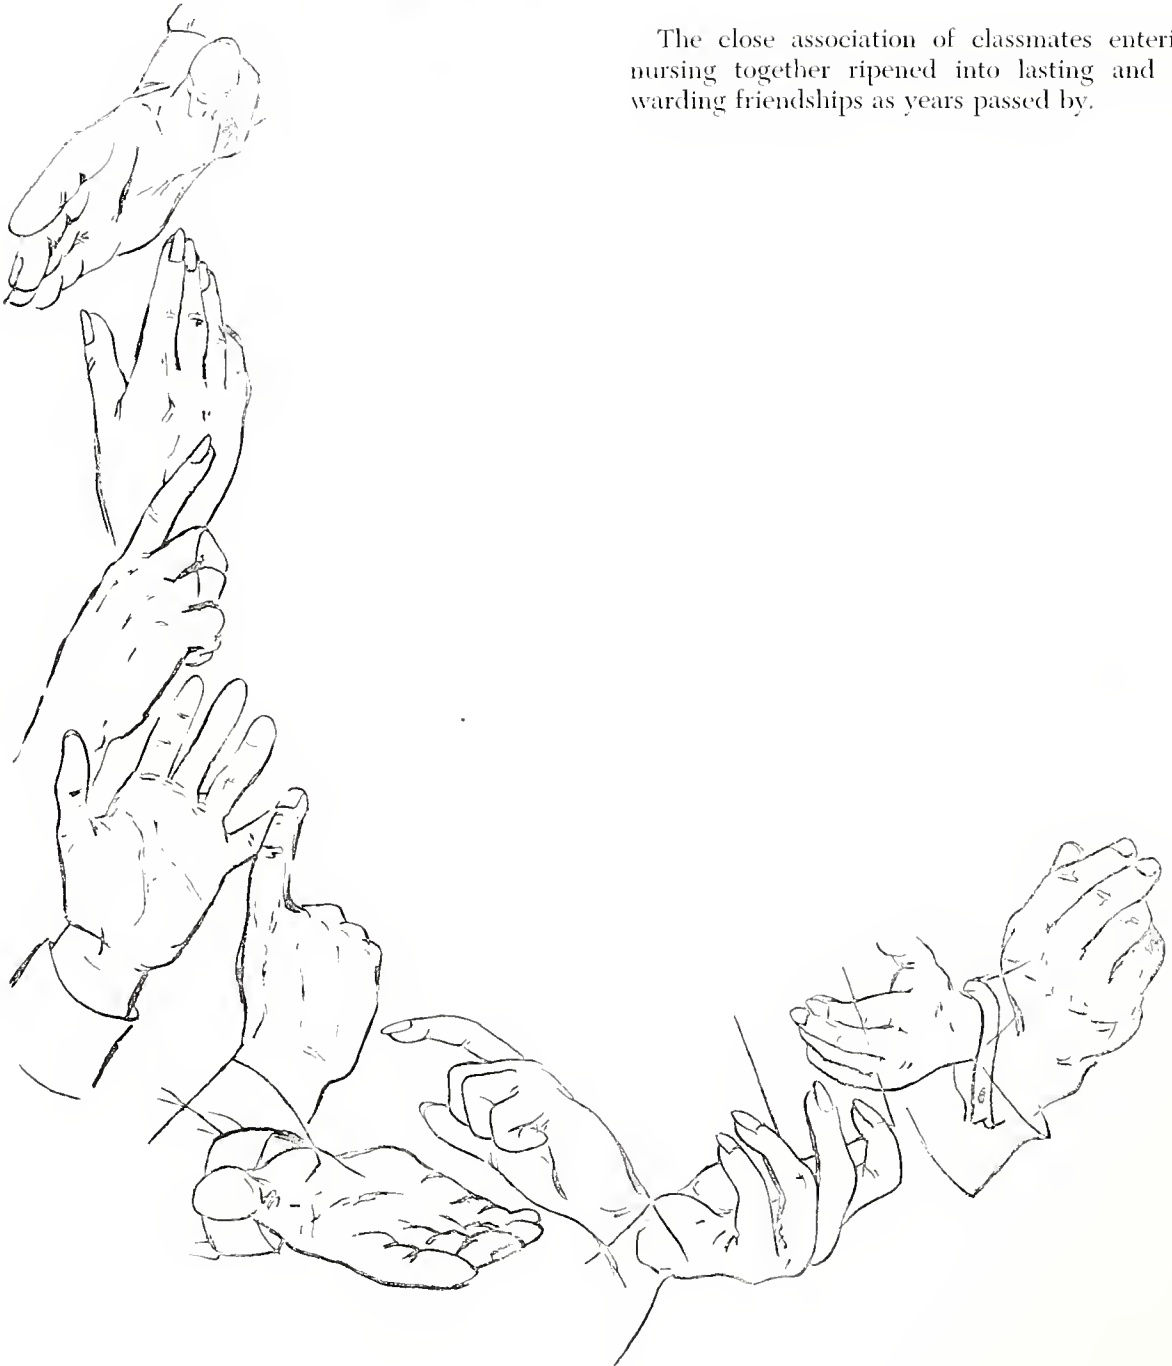

THEN: The Fairfield Avenue building in the late 1920's appears as a modest rigid brick structure.

NOW: The 1960 view of the branching hospital proudly displays the attractive cement and glass entrance.

STUDENTS

The close association of classmates entering nursing together ripened into lasting and rewarding friendships as years passed by.

Able leading the senior class this year were its four officers: Judith Rehm, vice-president; Elaine Scheppan, secretary; Paula Wilson, president; and Nancy Roesti, treasurer.

SENIORS

As the class of 1960 gathers for the baccalaureate services Sunday afternoon, August 21, in the Concordia Senior College Kramer Chapel there will be many mixed emotions. Sorrows as well as the joys of training have drawn us close to one another and in a sense we are reluctant to part. At Commencement on the following evening in North Side High School auditorium, the impressive graduation exercises mark the ending of three wonderful and busy years spent together. Mingled with the happiness of congratulations and the sadness of farewells will be the eagerness of all to enter the world of nursing and to better serve our fellow men.

Last year's Junior-Senior banquet marks the "beginning of the end."

The autumn taffy apple sale added to class revenues.

In October the class advisor, Miss Huyck, was the honored guest at a surprise party.

January 9, and we are finally measured for our white graduation uniforms!

ACADEMIC

Our unskilled hands were directed patiently in mastering the techniques and procedures correlated with textbook material already learned.

NURSING ARTS

So that the new student may acquire a knowledge of fundamental principles of nursing care, this course is started early in the probie year. The student is supervised in basic skills not only in the classroom but also in laboratory practice and actual ward participation.

Since accuracy is important, it is necessary that students learn correct blood pressure readings by practicing in spare time.

"Big Sis" juniors, having mastered basic skills, demonstrate procedures to little sisters in the freshman class.

One of the first techniques probies are taught, and one of the most used in nursing, is the art of bed making. Here a Mrs. Chase doll serves a freshman during a lab class.

SCIENCE CLASSES

Anatomy and Physiology, Chemistry, and Microbiology are all taught during the first year by Valparaiso University instructors. These courses, especially designed for nurses, stress the relation of sciences to health and disease.

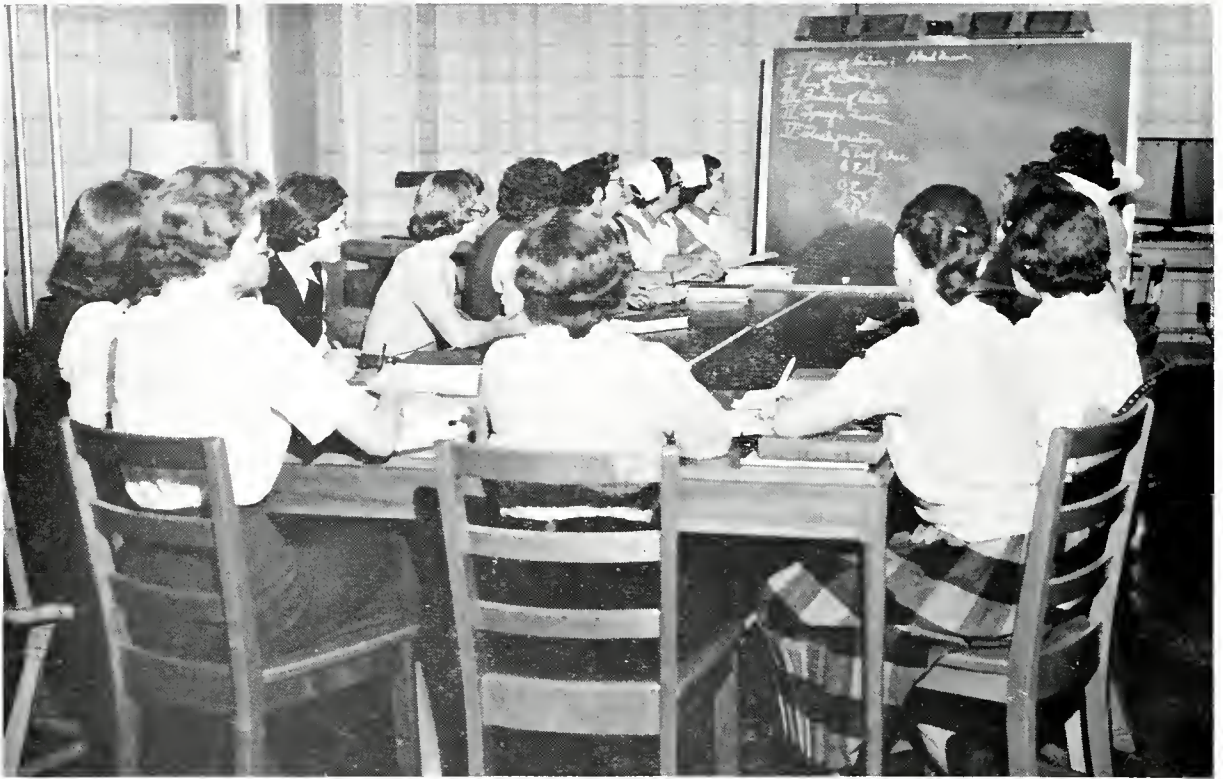

Laboratory partners here identify disease causing organism of an unknown nature by studying slides under the microscope in Microbiology class.

Life like model of the human ear aids students in Anatomy lab in understanding location and functions of its many structures.

Experiments in the chemistry lab enable freshmen to have a clearer conception of both normal and abnormal reactions of the human body.

PROFESSIONAL ADJUSTMENTS and FIRST-AID CLASSES

P. A. is offered in all three years and introduces students to the ideals, standards, and conduct of a professional nurse along with the study of managing a unit, history of nursing, and other aspects of our profession.

Freshmen always enjoy the Red Cross course in First Aid leading to a certificate in this field. Demonstrations and practice labs supplement theory.

A group of Juniors study a blackboard diagram showing lines of authority in hospital organization during a class period.

Of great importance is the correct application of a sling. This is used not only in orthopedic nursing, but also in the emergency room.

Often in First Aid lab sessions, students put theory to practice on their classmates. Demonstrated here is the scalp bandage technique.

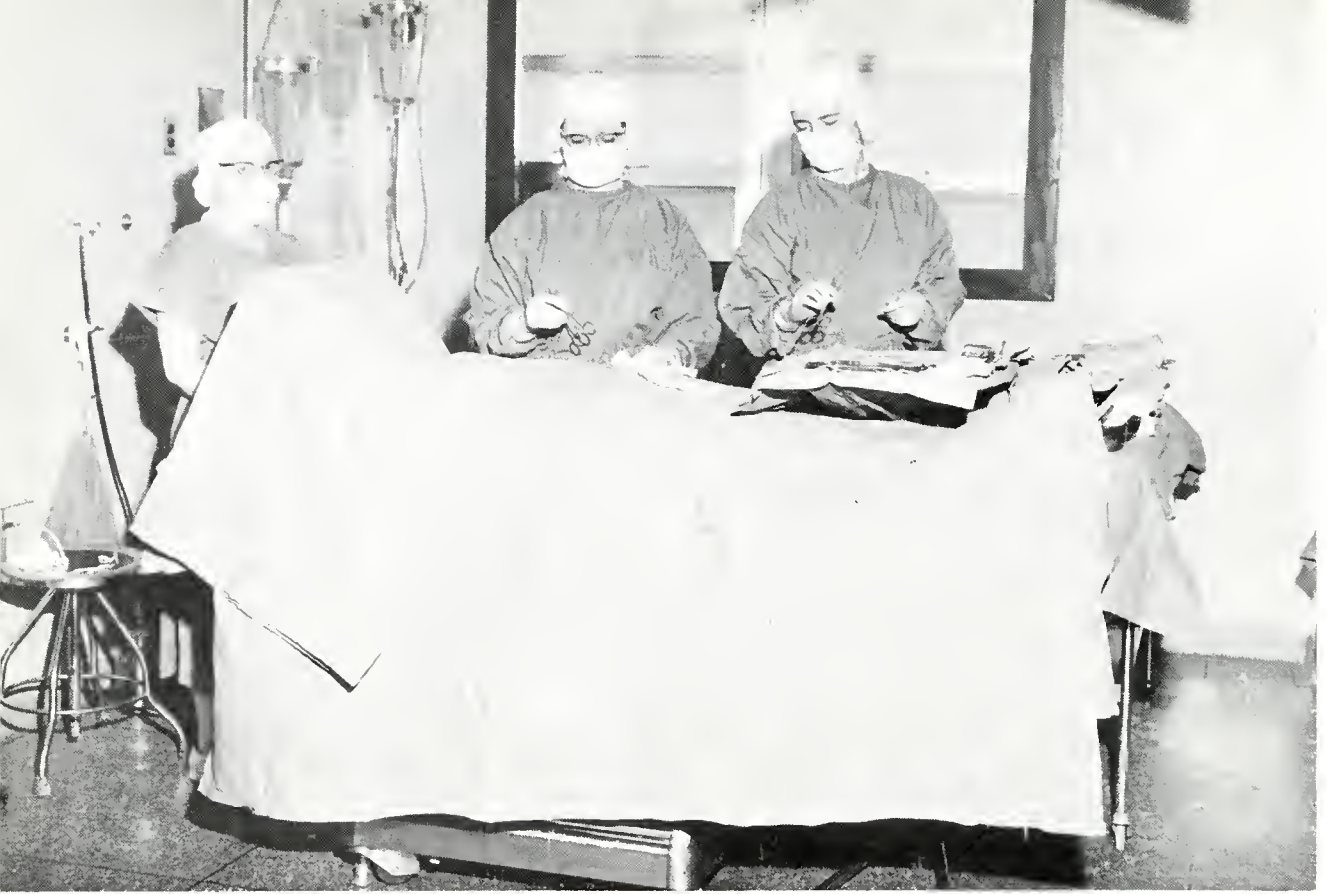

PSYCHOLOGY and SOCIOLOGY

Individual research and outside readings enable Sociology students to gain knowledge of group interactions.

The freshman class listens attentively as the professor lectures during a first semester Psychology class period.

These social sciences, Psychology and Sociology, taught by Valparaiso University instructors each semester, introduces the scientific method of approach not only in dealing with groups and institutions but also in handling interpersonal communications with other individuals.

OPERATING ROOM EXPERIENCE

Juniors learn sterile techniques and basic surgical skills during eight weeks in the operating room suite. By assisting the surgical team in operative procedures, the student gains insight into the normal and abnormal conditions of the human body.

Students having mastered draping, practice the art of passing instruments.

An important aspect of surgical experience is classroom instruction.

Under supervision, students put theory to practice in setting up a major pack.

DIET KITCHEN

During a month in Diet Therapy, upperclassmen study modifications of normal diets and learn how they meet needs of various conditions. Research papers, reports, and practice in writing menus make this specialty interesting and varied.

Two food service supervisors check with the dietician as to patient menu changes.

A Junior in Diet Therapy serves one of the countless special diet trays.

The observation of the tray serving line is a valuable learning aid for all students.

Junior observes anesthesiologist as he attends to the immediate needs of a new post-operative patient in the past-anesthesia-recovery room.

RECOVERY ROOM and CONSTANT CARE EXPERIENCE

Instruction in immediate post operative care and of anesthetized patients is offered the students in the Recovery Room. Next door, the Constant Care Unit offers skilled bedside care to patients whose condition requires constant vigilance.

Taking daily inventory of intravenous solutions is a necessary part of Constant Care nursing.

Having adequate emergency facilities on hand enables nurses to give uninterrupted continual care.

OBSTETRICS

Three fascinating months of the second year is spent in maternity nursing. Here, care of the mother and baby are followed through pregnancy to the post partum and post natal period. A month of hospital clinical experience is spent in each of the three areas: labor and delivery, post partum and the newborn nursery.

Working in the nursery gives us invaluable experience in caring for the newborn.

Because each new mother receives individual care, it is important that the nurse re-check the orders with the doctors.

Head nurse demonstrates the immediate care given a newborn while still in the delivery room.

PEDIATRIC NURSING

Seniors spend thirteen weeks studying the growth and development of the normal child along with the many pathological conditions of infancy and childhood. Films, field trips, lectures, conferences and projects all aid in stimulating interest in the nursing of children.

Senior and head nurse listen attentively as the pediatrician explains the nursing care to be given this infant.

Constant vigilance under the most aseptic conditions is given each baby in the premature nursery.

Our new playroom not only provides the student with an important learning experience but it also provides the convalescing children with diversional activity.

Every student gains skill and knowledge in the application of casts during her Emergency Room experience.

Of vital necessity is the knowledge of the correct location of each item contained in the well equipped cabinets so that assistance may be given without hesitation.

An important legal aspect of emergency treatment, the admission procedure is accomplished both efficiently and thoroughly.

EMERGENCY ROOM

In the course of the third year, each senior spends two weeks in the Emergency Room. Here she assists in treating major accidents and disease cases as well as gaining experience in the handling of out-patients.

MEDICAL-SURGICAL CLASSES

This integrated course teaches conditions of the various body systems and aids the student in understanding the body's adjustment to disease. Included are therapeutic treatment and symptomatic nursing care as taught by both doctor and nurse instructors.

The admission and discharge of a patient is practiced so that in an actual ward situation the patient can be put at ease.

Most of the hours in this course are spent in the classroom listening to lectures on various body conditions.

A group of seniors review a technique to be demonstrated at bi-weekly word class held for upper classmen on general floor duty.

PSYCHIATRY - E-3

To supplement the psychiatric experience gained on the state hospital affiliation, many seniors spend several weeks of duty on East Three. Here they use interpersonal relations to advantage in helping the patient to understand himself.

Willing seniors prepare snacks in well equipped kitchen on the psychiatric unit.

Relaxing diversion is provided for our patients in the floor lounge. Here they enjoy TV, puzzles, cards and other activities under able guidance.

For the benefit of two seniors, the head nurse explains the use of the electro-convulsive-treatment equipment.

LOGANSPORT

The three months spent on psychiatric affiliation at Logansport State Hospital, Logansport, Indiana, assist the student immeasurably in self understanding as well as teaching the study of the mind and personality with its complex pattern of behavior. Clinical experience is given in several of the wards, as well as in recreational, occupational and work therapy.

The nurses' home, behind the greenhouse, looks impressive and stately.

Pictured here is a closer view of the "home" for our three month affiliation.

A student pauses briefly before entering a locked active treatment ward.

Affiliations mean meeting girls from other schools on duty, in the dorm, or at the canteen for a snack.

IRENE BYRON

Clinical and classroom teaching in the nursing of tuberculosis and of isolation technique is offered during the six weeks each student spends at Irene Byron Hospital, just north of the city limits. Included in the course are medical and surgical treatments, preventative aspects and rehabilitation factors.

One of the instructors, Miss Nellie Green, chats with a group of students during a Valentine's day party at Irene Byron.

A happy affiliate pitches a ball to a long term patient out for a walk on a sunny afternoon.

The spacious country lawns at the hospital provided city students with added enjoyment.

With its many white awnings and well kept grounds, the hospital presents a pleasing picture to the new-comer.

ACTIVITIES

We eagerly participated in various projects and organizations in order to make off duty hours more useful and to develop leadership skills.

Hub of the student government, the Executive Committee meets prior to each monthly student body meeting.

Officers for '59-'60 were Carol Stellhorn, vice president; Nancy Gerber, secretary; Rebekah Liechty, president; Donna Grubb, treasurer.

The Judiciary Committee meets often to deliberate disciplinary measures involving dormitory living.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT

The Student Nurse Association consisting of all students and elected faculty members meets monthly to provide communication to the administration. This organization also fosters social activities and offers opportunities for leadership.

CHOIR

Choir, a mandatory activity for first year students, provides an experience in which we all have found inner strength and through which we have gained additional music appreciation under skilled direction. The happy strains of many blended voices drift from the auditorium during rehearsal every Thursday evening.

It's fun to sing for our enthusiastic choir director, Mrs. Olga Abel!

To obtain close harmony, small sectional groups meet frequently.

A portion of the rehearsal is spent in acquiring the fundamentals of music theory.

APPENDIX

So that students may have a permanent remembrance, the yearbook is published annually. It highlights and records the classes and events in the school that year. Also assisting the editors and not pictured were M. Winter, copy; and Mr. Armond Gemmer of the hospital administration; J. Rehm and C. Doehrman, sales, and J. Werner, Jr., editor.

Key staff members pause for photo during bi-weekly meeting. From left to right are K. Layman, sales; B. Ward, photos; E. Aeschleman, Freshman editor; B. Leonard, Ads chairman; K. Allgood, Ads, and C. Fleming, Business Mgr.

Editor Marilyn Rott is writing her editorial under the watchful eye of Natalie Krueckeberg, standing. Doris Schulenberg reads last month's issue.

LAMPLIGHTER

Ably led by M. Rott and D. Schulenberg, the Lamplighter publishes up to date school news on a monthly basis. It also features class news, senior sketclies, new personnel interviews, humor and a calendar of events and has a wide circulation among students, alumnae, and the hospital staff.

Humor editor, N. Roesti smiles over typist M. Winter's shoulder as she types copy. Miss Carlley and F. Fogal wait nearby to proofread.
